Dr Scoville

ADM-1

1. The purpose of this note is simply to forward the attached pieces of paper to you. Two of them represent later chapters in the Battle of Charter Ridge, and the third is simply historical having been swiped from your files in your absence.

2. As Ed will tell you in greater detail, [REDACTED] and I had a total of about seven hours meeting with [REDACTED] in an attempt to drive a camel through the eye of a needle. The result was the thermofaxed paper attached which, I insist, is clearer than Kirk's earlier versions, but which is still almost incomprehensible. 25X1A9a

3. Following these meetings [REDACTED] came down to meet with Ed, prior to which we had prepared a totally different sort of an announcement (attached) which without further ado turns over practically everything to us. This was shown to [REDACTED] but not given to him. At the conclusion of this meeting, Ed requested [REDACTED] to report to General Carter that the DD/R did not find the attached thermofax notice satisfactory, and that further the DD/R could live with virtually any assignment of functions, provided the assignment was crystal clear. All of this occurred on Wednesday, 18 July. 25X1A9a

4. You have heard entirely too much discussion and have received too many papers on this subject already. My final thought on all this is that nobody but General Carter (or Mr. McCone, who thinks he has already done so) can rule on this matter, but it is equally clear that Carter doesn't feel himself capable, or for some other reason doesn't want, to cut the mustard. Perhaps it is now time to hand him a paper which embodies our conception of how this ought to be done. It may or it may not be the attached draft, but I think we are all agreed that Kirk's various drafts are sterile.
